

Finger Marker

While you're waiting, draw a shape (like a circle or a wiggly line), using your fingertip on your child's open palm. Can he/she name it? Repeat the same shape until your child can guess what it is. Take turns back and forth, drawing and guessing hand shapes.

When you make a finger marker, you give your child a chance to put together what he/she knows about how shapes look with how shapes feel. It is a new and fun way to learn shapes through the sense of touch.
