Dear New Hampshire Parents and Caregivers,

As a father of three, I can attest to the incredible joys of parenting as well as its many challenges. Navigating everyday stresses as a family can be difficult, yet when I look across the Granite State, I see children thriving and growing into healthy and resilient adolescents who are the future of our state.

Thank you for your patience, diligence, and incredible resilience during these unprecedented times.

I also want to thank the thousands of New Hampshire grandparents, aunts and uncles, and other relatives stepping up to care for children whose own parents cannot. Welcoming a child into your home is joyful, but it can be stressful and financially burdensome. Navigating legal, school, and healthcare systems is trying even on the best of days, but these important efforts minimize trauma and improve a child’s overall well-being.

To meet the unique challenges of kinship care, we have brought together family support agencies and organizations from across New Hampshire to create a relative caregiver support network called the Kinship Navigation Program. Rooted within NH’s Family Resource Centers, the Kinship Navigation Program connects grandparents and other relative caregivers to the services and supports that promote independence and enhance family well-being.

In the Kinship & Relative Caregiver Guide that follows, you will learn of this network and the many free, voluntary, and completely confidential resources available throughout the Granite State.

It is because of the hard work of New Hampshire’s parent leaders, community stakeholders, and family support agencies, there is a Kinship Navigator at the ready in your community.

Sincerely,

Christopher T. Sununu
Governor

Am I a Kinship Caregiver?

Kinship caregivers are grandparents, aunts, uncles or other relatives, or even close family friends such as godparents, who are raising children that are not their own.

Kinship caregiving happens when a child’s parents are unable to meet their family’s needs. Relatives or close family friends are an important resource because kinship care helps children maintain connection to family members, and in some cases even schools and communities, and increases child well-being until the situation at home improves.

Kinship care arrangements may be formal and involve a legal process, payments to help with the costs of caring for the child, and other support services. Some kinship care arrangements are informal and involve an assessment process to ensure the safety of the new home along with supportive services for the child and caregivers.

If you’re a kinship caregiver, turn to page 6 to find support for the children in your care.

Types of Kinship Arrangements

Informal Arrangement: An informal arrangement is when a relative is raising a child without the involvement of a court or child protection agency. Because the law does not recognize informal caretaker arrangements, caretakers may find themselves without the legal ability to make certain decisions for the child, such as enrolling them in school or consenting to medical treatment.

Legal Guardianship: Caretakers can acquire custody and legal guardianship of a child, which gives caretakers the right to make certain decisions for the child, such as enrolling them in school or consenting to medical treatment, and they may qualify for State financial assistance.

Foster Care/DCYF Placement: In New Hampshire, when a child is determined unsafe in their home because of abuse or neglect, they may be removed from that home and placed in care of others. In this situation, parents are required to work towards reunification with their child.

Adoption: Adoption is when the Family Court grants full custody and guardianship of a child to an adopting caregiver. Relative adoptions are a permanent and legal arrangement, but the child’s parents must either voluntarily surrender their parental rights through the court process or the court must terminate their parental rights.

For more information on the formal process, please visit www.dhhs.nh.gov/dcyf/adoption
You are not alone. In New Hampshire:

- 17,594 children under 18 live in homes where householders are grandparents or other relatives.*
  - 14,887 of these children live with grandparents.

- 2,707 of these children live with other relatives.

- 8,000 children live with a relative with no parent present.

In 2016, 1,200 children/youth were in out-of-home Child Protection Services (CPS) or Juvenile Justice Services (JJS) placement.*

DCYF receives more than 20,000 reports of suspected child abuse and neglect each year.\(^{\circ}\)

DID YOU KNOW?

Almost half of grandparent caregivers are age 60+ and at greater risk for COVID-19. Because of the pandemic, grandparents and relative caregivers experience heightened need for support relating to housing, food security, and alternative care plans for the children.*

Additionally, many grandparents and relative caregivers face increased hardship given changes to their caretaking role that include: virtual-learning technology barriers and balancing academic obligations with increased caretaking responsibilities.

While the strain on kinship families has increased because of COVID-19, help is available. The Kinship Navigation Program can provide crucial supports to kinship caregivers during the pandemic. Learn more about our NH Kinship Navigation Program on the following page.

BENEFITS OF KINSHIP CARE

For Children and Families

Research shows that living with relatives is better for children and benefits them in several ways.

Minimizes trauma: When children are separated from their birth parents, they often experience a sense of loss. Placing a child with relative caregivers helps preserve family culture, reducing the trauma of removal. Family members are more likely to take sibling groups, live in the same or nearby neighborhoods, and provide the additional comfort of living with someone where a relationship already exists.

Enhances well-being: Children in kinship care are more likely to benefit from Protective Factors that improve overall well-being. They experience increased stability, social connections, and support with basic needs from their relative caregivers that helps children develop social and emotional competence and build resilience during a challenging time.

Increases permanency for children: A child is less likely to enter foster care when they’re placed with kin because relative caregivers are more likely to provide a permanent home through guardianship, custody, or adoption. Youth who spent 100% of their time placed with family while in out-of-home care transition to legal permanency significantly faster and at a higher rate.*

Improves mental and behavioral health: Children in kinship care have better mental and behavioral health outcomes. Through increased permanency, children can develop close relationships through pre-existing ties with their relative caregiver, allowing for safe, stable, and social and emotional growth.

Promotes sibling ties: Children in kinship care are more likely to be placed with or stay connected to their siblings. Family members are often willing to caretake large sibling groups, reducing trauma and minimizing loss.

Provides a bridge for older youth: The connection to family or another supportive adult is critical for older youths. Adolescents and teens who have emotionally sustaining and committed relationships with positive role-models increase resiliency and self-sufficiency.

Preserves cultural identity and community connections: Children in kinship care are more likely to stay connected to their extended family and maintain their cultures and customs. Family and community connections are critical to healthy child development and fostering a sense of belonging and self-worth.

CHALLENGES OF KINSHIP CARE

For Caregivers*

Depending on their kinship arrangement, relative caregivers may need additional supports.

Financial assistance: Kinship caregivers often face financial hurdles when they add new members to their family. For example, kinship caregivers may be grandparents who are retired with a fixed income. Financial planning or assistance can help kinship families stay strong and resilient.

Legal assistance: Many caregivers need affordable legal assistance when making decisions around the custody of the child. For example, they may want to know whether to pursue legal guardianship. Birth parents have a role in many of these family situations, and caregivers need to be informed of their options for protecting the child.

Counseling resources/Emotional support: Children in kinship care often need help with trauma, understanding their new living situation, or behavioral challenges that result from separation and/or prior abuse or neglect. Additionally, relative caregivers may need their own respite time, recreation, counseling, and emotional support from others. Emotional support is often cited as the most important long-term need of many caregivers in Kinship Navigation Programs.

Child care: Finding affordable child care that meets the family’s needs can be a challenge for kinship caregivers. Because a large share of caregivers work outside the home, or require respite time from the demanding role of caring for a child, reliable and affordable child care is critical.

Transportation: Transportation can also be a challenge for kinship caregivers. In some cases, caregivers may be unable to participate in alternative program activities or get children to medical appointments because they do not have access to reliable transportation.

Tutoring for the child: Some kinship caregivers may feel out of practice with parenting and have difficulty assisting children with certain aspects of their homework. These caregivers might need assistance with tutoring the child for fear that the child’s academic performance could suffer.

Health insurance for the child: Health insurance for relative children is an issue for kinship caregivers with and without health insurance. Even if a caregiver has health insurance, not all relative children are eligible under the caregiver’s health plan. Some kinship caregivers may not have health insurance themselves and worry about the cost of health insurance for the child.

Shame: Remember our child’s behavior is not a mirror reflecting a report card back to us of how we did as a parent. A parent’s job is to take responsibility for his or her own actions. You cannot possibly be responsible for your child’s choices; you can influence them, but ultimately you can’t control them. You need to be there for your child in good or bad times, get help when necessary, and be a helpful guide. Most importantly, simply keep showing up.

The information on this page is from the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, Office of the Assistant Secretary for Planning and Evaluation.
What is Caregiver Burnout?

Caring for a child when their parents cannot is both rewarding and challenging. Along with its many joys, kinship care can also include various stressors, the emotional impact of which could escalate without proper self-care and support.

If the stress of caretaking isn't properly managed, it can have a profound effect on your health, relationships, and state of mind, eventually leading to burnout—a state of mental, emotional, and physical exhaustion, affecting both you and the child or children in your care.

Meeting your own physical and emotional needs is just as important as meeting the needs of others. Developing self-care routines and fostering resilience depends on establishing healthy coping mechanisms, maintaining connections with people who support you and your caregiving, and knowing where to turn for help when needed.

Knowing the signs and symptoms of caregiver stress and burnout is important because it allows you to recognize and address the problems at hand before the situation for you and your family becomes worse.
